

Quiz 25-1: Who versus Whom

Edit the following sentences to eliminate errors in the use of who and whom. Do not change correct sentences. Example:

Kelly had heard so many different accounts of the robbery that she didn't know ^{whom} ~~who~~ to believe.

1. You will probably like Rita, whom is also coming to dinner.
2. Whom did you interview for the job?
3. They will become business partners with whomever is willing to contribute to the company's coffers.
4. For years members of the government conducted business with a man who was a leader of the Mafia.
5. The elderly woman who I was asked to take care of was a clever, delightful companion.
6. Some group leaders cannot handle the pressure; they give whomever makes the most noise most of their attention.
7. Who did the commission appoint?
8. "In that costume they will never realize whom you are!" laughed the duke.
9. I was very excited about meeting Sarah Siddons, who I had admired all my life.
10. The young man who I danced with was an exchange student from Italy.